

Frost Law Group Search Audit

Two websites, one plan. What Google Search Console says about frostlawgroupsc.com and summervilleaccidentattorney.com, what it means in plain English, and exactly what to build next — on the sites, on YouTube, on LinkedIn, on Instagram, on your Google Business Profile and on Yelp.

The 60-second version

Both websites are being shown by Google far more than they are being clicked. The main site is found by people who already know your name; the injury site is on page 5–6 for everything. The good news: Google already treats the firm as relevant for estate, probate, criminal and DUI searches in Summerville — the pages just aren't built to win the click yet.

Six findings that explain the numbers

- 1 Almost every click on the main site comes from people who already know your name.

Of the 93 clicks Google attributes to identifiable searches, 86 contained “frost”. Only 7 clicks came from the 565 non-brand searches — even though those searches produced 5,697 impressions. Google is showing you; people aren't choosing you yet.

- 2 Google already shows the firm for money searches — through the Business Profile link, not the website.

The address stored in your Business Profile (<http://www.frostlawgroupsc.com/>) collected 4,405 impressions at an average position of 6.3, for searches like “summerville dui lawyer”, “estate planning attorney” and “landlord tenant attorney in summerville sc”. Your actual practice pages sit at positions 16–35 for the same topics.

- 3 The two sites compete with each other for injury searches.

19 injury searches showed both domains. The injury site averages position 57.4 and has 1 click in 51 days; the main site's injury page averages position 50.9. Neither wins because each is holding the other back.

- 4 The injury site's rebuild dropped the pages that were getting seen.

17 old URLs (Goose Creek, Mount Pleasant, the attorneys page, the blog, truck and wrongful-death pages) now say “This page could not be found”, yet they still collected 1,164 impressions — 43% of everything the site was shown for. They need redirects and, for the city pages, rebuilding.

- 5 Basic plumbing is splitting your signals.

Every inner page of the main site shares one title tag; every page of the injury site shares another. 11 main-site pages exist at two or three addresses (with and without `www` , with and without a trailing slash) and Google is counting them separately. Google's index still shows the main home page as “Remodeling – Coming Soon” from the redesign.

- 6 Google's AI is already using the main site to answer estate and probate questions.

19 question-style searches — “who handles executor disputes in summerville, sc probate court?”, “which attorneys in summerville, sc handle contested guardianship cases?” — showed the site 180 times at average positions between 4 and 13. These are the sub-questions Google's AI asks itself (its “fan-out”). No page on the site is written to answer any of them yet.

If we only do five things this month

- ☐ Fix the plumbing. One address per page, redirects for the other versions, a unique title on every page, and the Business Profile pointed at <https://frostlawgroupsc.com/> . (Weeks 1–2.)
- ☐ Build the missing money pages. Main site: DUI, drug charges, CDV/domestic violence, guardianship & conservatorship, asset protection. Injury site: Goose Creek and four more city pages, plus a Spanish car-accident page. (Weeks 3–6.)
- ☐ Tune the Business Profile. Categories, photos, services, a weekly post, and a review routine. It is already the thing Google shows most — make it convert.
- ☐ Publish the first answer pages. Start with the 8 fan-out questions Google is already asking you. Short, direct, local, with a video.
- ☐ Start the flywheel. One video a week from Jack or Tara becomes a YouTube video, three clips, a LinkedIn post, an Instagram reel and a Business Profile post. Same work, seven places.

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

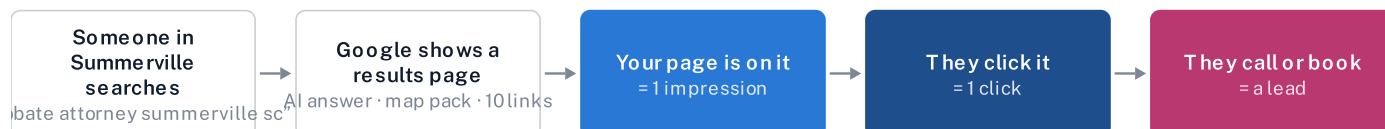

Google is a librarian. Right now she pulls your book off the shelf a lot, but the cover is blank (same title on every page), the book is filed under two call numbers (two addresses), and it isn't the book people asked for (they asked about DUI; you handed them "Criminal Defense"). We're going to give every page its own cover, one call number, and write the exact books people are asking for.

How Google works, explained simply

Everything in this report uses five words. Here is what they mean, with the picture that goes with them.

What happens when someone searches

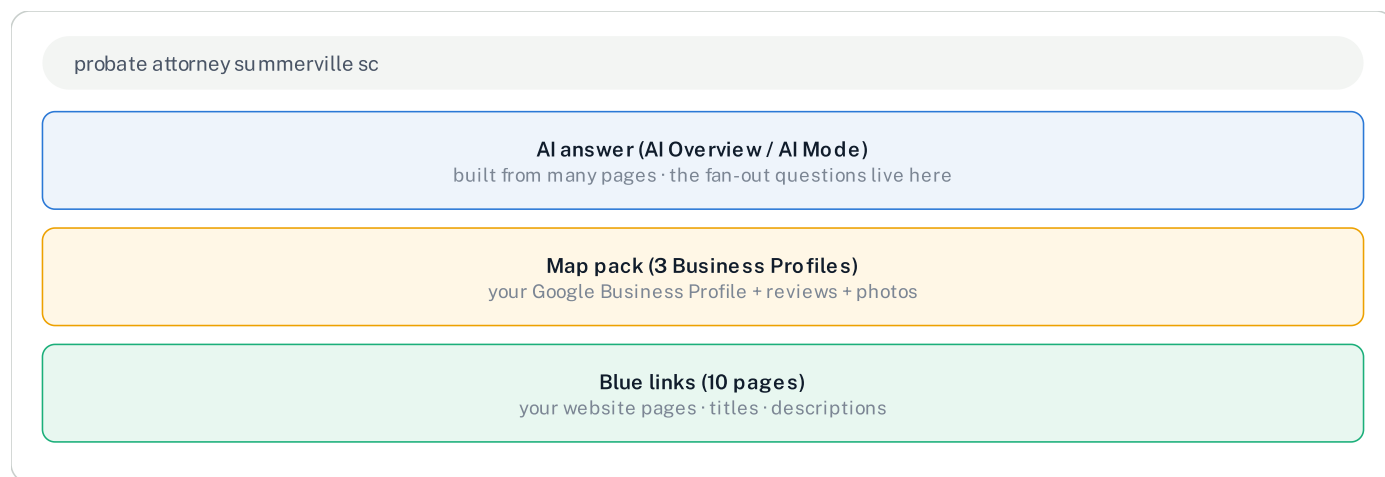

The five steps between a search and a phone call

An impression is Google showing your page. A click is the person choosing it. Position is where on the page you were (1–10 is page one). CTR is clicks divided by impressions. A query is the exact words the person typed.

The three places you can appear on a results page

Each zone is won differently

The AI answer is assembled from many pages and rewards pages that answer one small question cleanly. The map pack is your Business Profile: reviews, photos, categories, distance. The blue links are your website pages: titles, content, authority.

What “topical authority” means

Imagine two law firms. Firm A has one page called “Estate Planning”. Firm B has that page, plus a page for wills, one for trusts, one for powers of attorney, one explaining what happens if you die without a will in South Carolina, one about blended families, one about what it costs, one about reviewing an old plan — all linked to each other, all written for Summerville and Dorchester County. The librarian trusts Firm B as the expert. She sends Firm B the hard questions and the easy ones. That trust is topical authority, and it is earned one connected page at a time.

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

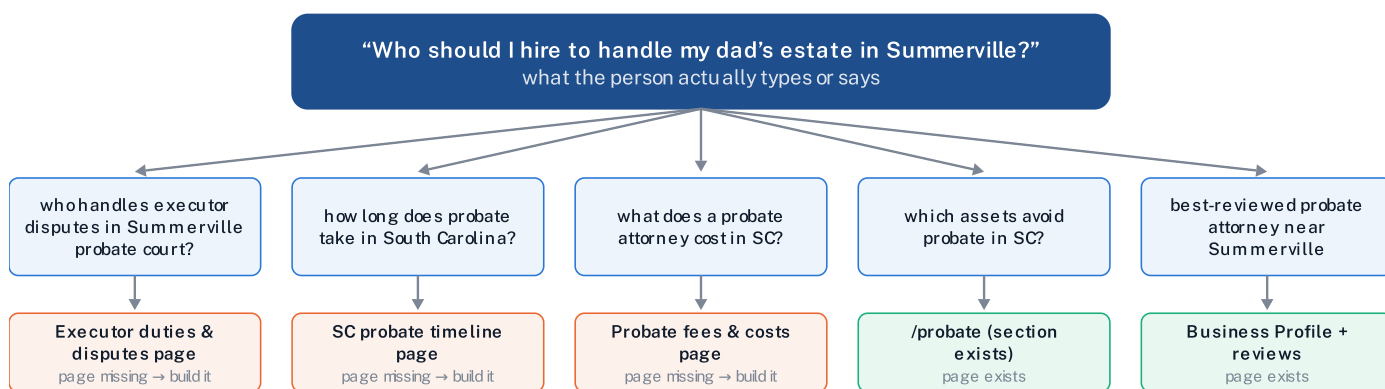

Firm A wrote a pamphlet. Firm B wrote the whole shelf. Google hands the shelf to people first. Our plan is to write the shelf — for estate planning, probate and criminal defense on the main site, and for injuries on the injury site.

What Google's AI “fan-out” means (and why it's in your data)

When someone asks Google's AI a big question — “who should handle my dad's estate in Summerville?” — the AI doesn't search that sentence. It quietly splits it into five or ten smaller questions, searches each one, and stitches the answers together. Those smaller questions are called fan-out queries. They show up in Search Console as oddly precise, complete sentences. You already have 19 of them. Section 8 shows how to use them.

Fan-out: one big question becomes five small ones

Google's AI picks one clean page per small question

Google's AI runs the small questions, then stitches the answers — one clean page per small question is how you get picked.

Two of the five small questions already have a home. Three don't — those are pages to write. When every small question has a page, you get quoted in the big answer.

Why the Business Profile and Yelp matter

Your Google Business Profile is the sign on the map. It decides whether you are in the three-business map pack, and it already produces more impressions than any page on your website (Section 3). Yelp is a second sign that other assistants read: ChatGPT, Bing and Apple Maps lean on Yelp's listings and reviews when someone asks them for “a good probate attorney near Summerville". A complete, claimed Yelp listing with the right categories is how you get named in those answers.

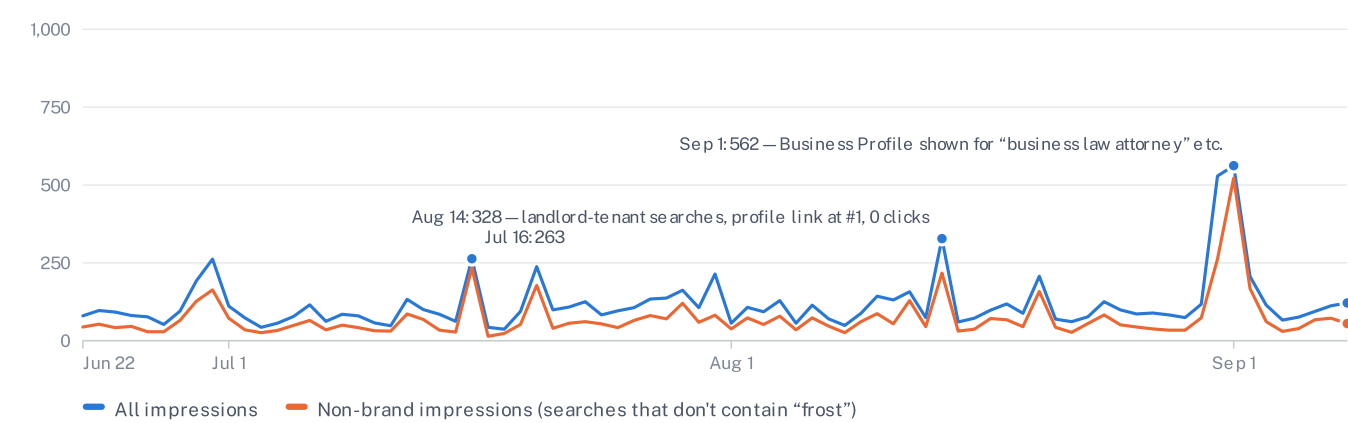

frostlawgroupsc.com: seen a lot, clicked by people who already know you

Search Console has data for this property from June 22, 2026 — the redesign. In 79 days Google showed the site 9,259 times and people clicked 199 times.

3.1 The trend

Daily impressions, all searches vs. non-brand searches

Jun 22 – Sep 8, 2026

The spikes are not website wins. They are days when your Business Profile link was shown at position 1 for local searches (landlord-tenant, business law, DUI) — hundreds of impressions, almost no clicks. Steady non-brand impressions run 30–80 a day.

Daily clicks

Never more than nine in a day; most days one to three

Clicks are flat because nearly all of them are people searching your name. The non-brand line above is what has to grow.

3.2 Brand vs. non-brand

Clicks by type of search

199 clicks in 79 days

Impressions by type of search

9,259 impressions in 79 days

Search Console hides very rare searches for privacy (the gray segment). Among the searches it does show, brand searches produced 86 clicks from 1,077 impressions (a 8% click-through rate); non-brand searches produced 7 clicks from 5,697 impressions (0.1%).

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

Out of every 100 times Google showed you for a search that did not include the word “frost”, people clicked about 0.1 times. The people who did click mostly typed “frost law group” — they were coming to see you anyway. The whole opportunity is in the orange segment.

3.3 Where the impressions actually land

Two “home pages” in the data

Impressions, with clicks and average position at right

<http://www.frostlawgroupsc.com/> is the exact address saved in your Google Business Profile. Google credits that address whenever the profile appears with its website link. That is why it shows a great average position (6.3) with a 2.0% click-through rate: people click Call or Directions, not the website button. The real home page averages position 36.7.

Why this matters: Google already knows the firm is relevant for DUI, estate planning, business law, divorce and landlord-tenant searches in Summerville — it shows the Business Profile for them at position 1. The website doesn't get those clicks because the pages behind the profile aren't the pages people want (there is no DUI page, no landlord-tenant page, no divorce page).

11 of 14 pages exist at more than one address. Google has picked the no-trailing-slash <https://frostlawgroupsc.com/...> versions as the official ones (we checked with the URL Inspection tool), but the site itself still links to the slash versions, so both keep collecting impressions.

Devices

Clicks by device

199 clicks

Impressions by device

9,259 impressions

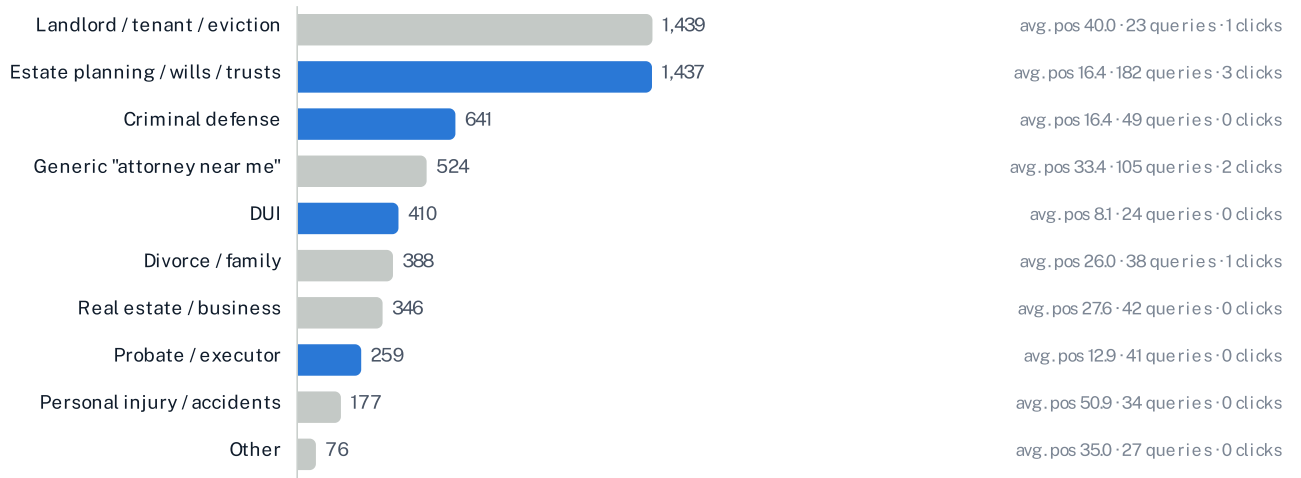

Desktop impressions are inflated by the Business Profile link (desktop shows the profile panel far more). On mobile — where real local searches happen — the site's click-through rate is 6.0% at an average position of 14.45. That is the number we'll move.

3.4 What people search for (and how far away you are)

Non-brand impressions by topic

Highlighted: the four subjects the main site should own

Landlord-tenant and eviction searches are the biggest single bucket, and there is no page for them — those impressions are the Business Profile being shown at position 1, and the home page at position 50–60. Estate planning is the biggest bucket the site actually competes in, and it already averages page 2. DUI averages position 8 — but almost entirely through the profile link, because the criminal-defense page sits at ~30 for DUI searches.

3.5 Where you rank, in buckets

Non-brand queries by position bucket

565 queries

Non-brand impressions by position bucket

5,697 impressions

The 115 queries in positions 1–3 produced 1 click — they are the Business Profile link, not pages. The realistic “about to break through” group is positions 4–20: 177 queries and 1,798 impressions, almost all of them estate, probate and criminal.

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

Position 4–20 means you're on page one near the bottom or on page two. Those are the books already on the cart — a better cover (title), a better first page (opening paragraph), and a few more chapters (FAQs) is usually what moves them to eye level.

3.6 Quick wins: searches already close to page one on your own pages

These are non-brand searches where one of the site's real pages (not the profile link) sits between positions 4 and 20 with at least five impressions. Each row is a small, specific piece of work.

3.7 The questions Google's AI is already asking you

Question-style searches (fan-out) that showed the main site

19 questions · 180 impressions · positions mostly 4–13

Notice the shape: complete, specific, local sentences. Nobody types these. Google's AI generates them when a person asks a bigger question, and it is pulling your estate-planning, probate and trust pages into the answer. Every one of these deserves its own short page (Section 8).

3.8 Technical findings on the main site

- Fix first

Google's index still shows the home page title as “Remodeling – Coming Soon – Summerville Estate Planning & Criminal Defense Attorneys”.

The live page title is fine (“Frost Law Group, LLC | Summerville, SC Estate Planning & Injury Attorneys”); Google hasn't refreshed it since the redesign. Fix: request indexing for the home page in Search Console after the plumbing fixes below, and keep the home page linked from every page.
- Fix first

Every inner page shares one title tag: “Frost Law Group, LLC — Summerville, SC Law Firm”.

The title is the book cover and the single strongest on-page signal. Probate, criminal defense, wills, trusts and powers of attorney all wear the same one. Appendix C lists a proposed title for every page.

Fix first 11 pages live at two or three addresses.

Google chose the no-slash `https://frostlawgroupsc.com/page` versions. The site's own navigation links to the slash versions and the Business Profile links to `http://www`. Fix: 301-redirect `http://`, `www.` and trailing-slash versions to the official address; update every internal link; set the Business Profile website to `https://frostlawgroupsc.com/`. Also remove or redirect leftovers Google found: `/probate-2/`, `/about-us/?swcfpc=1`, `/author/adminfrost-lawgroup-com/`.

Fix soon The personal-injury page competes with the injury site.

`/motor-vehicle-personal-injury` (two addresses, 170 impressions, average position 14–32) targets the same searches as `summervilleaccidentattorney.com`. Section 5 gives the rule; the short version is: one site per subject.

Fix soon “In The Know” has no articles.

The blog page shows four cards, but each “Read more” goes to a practice page or to the injury site. There is no informational content on the site at all — which is exactly what topical authority and fan-out answers require.

Fix soon Practice pages are short.

Criminal defense is ~480 words with no sub-pages for DUI, drug charges or CDV even though the Business Profile lists all three as services and Search Console shows demand for each. Estate planning is ~580 words. Probate (~970) and powers of attorney (~1,000) are the best-built pages — and, not by coincidence, the ones Google's AI already quotes.

Improve No YouTube or LinkedIn links on the site; Facebook, X and Instagram only.

Add the LinkedIn company page and the YouTube channel (once created) to the header/footer and to the firm's structured data (`sameAs`), so Google connects the profiles to the firm.

Improve No FAQ, attorney or LegalService structured data detected by Search Console on the inspected pages.

Adding LegalService (with address, phone, hours, `sameAs`), Attorney bios and FAQPage markup gives Google and the AI systems a clean, machine-readable version of who you are and what you answer.

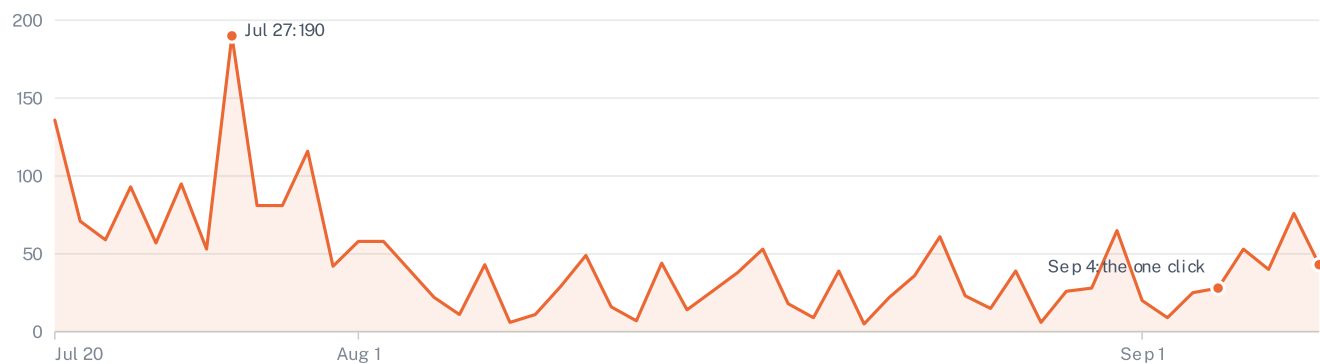

summervilleaccidentattorney.com: on page six for everything

Search Console has data from July 20, 2026. In 51 days the site was shown 2,285 times, at an average position of 57.4, and was clicked 1 time.

4.1 The trend

Daily impressions

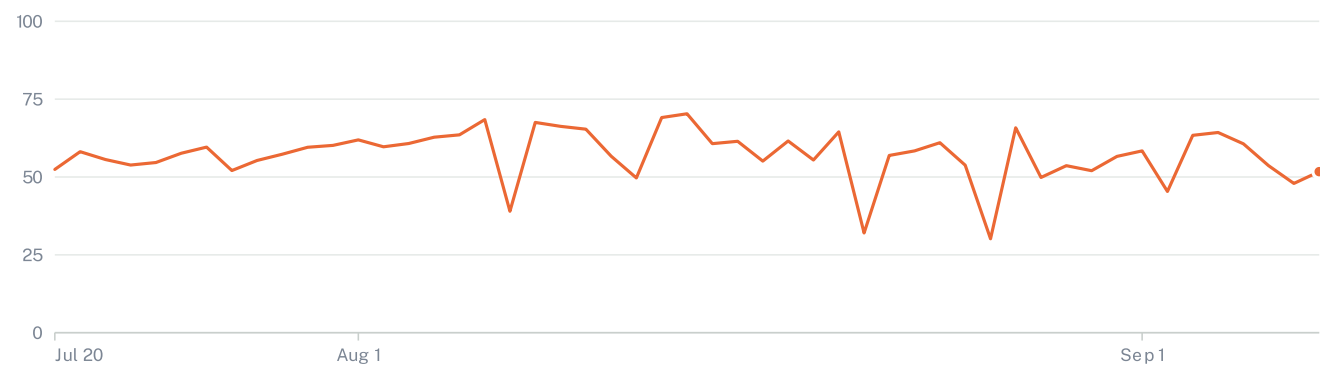

Jul 20 – Sep 8, 2026

Impressions fell through August as the removed old-site pages started dropping out of Google's index, then recovered slightly in September as the new practice-area pages were picked up.

Daily average position

Lower is better; page one is 1-10

The site has never averaged better than position 30 on any day. Page-six positions are effectively invisible: fewer than one searcher in a hundred looks there.

4.2 Where you rank, in buckets

Queries by position bucket

245 queries

Impressions by position bucket

2,597 impressions

175 of 245 queries — and 83% of impressions — are at position 51 or worse. Nothing is on page one. The closest group is dog bites.

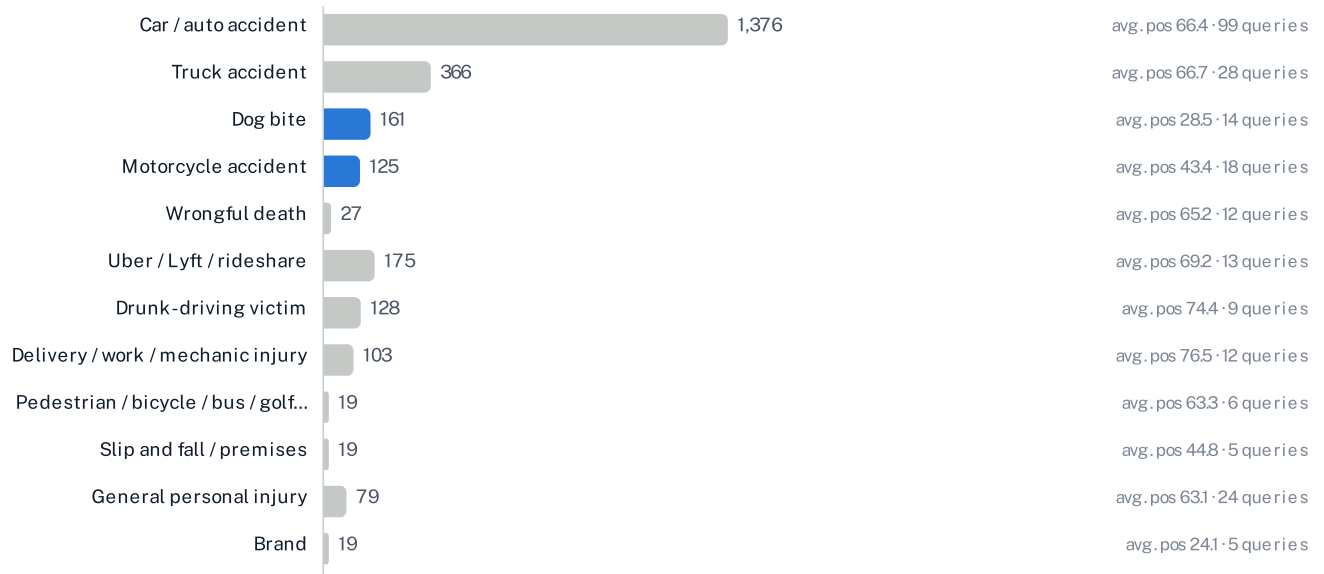

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

Google knows this site exists and files it under the right subject. It just doesn't trust it yet: the site is new, has almost no reputation, and lost its most-seen pages in the rebuild. Trust is built with the plan in Sections 6–9; the redirects in 4.4 stop the bleeding first.

4.3 What people search for

Impressions by case type

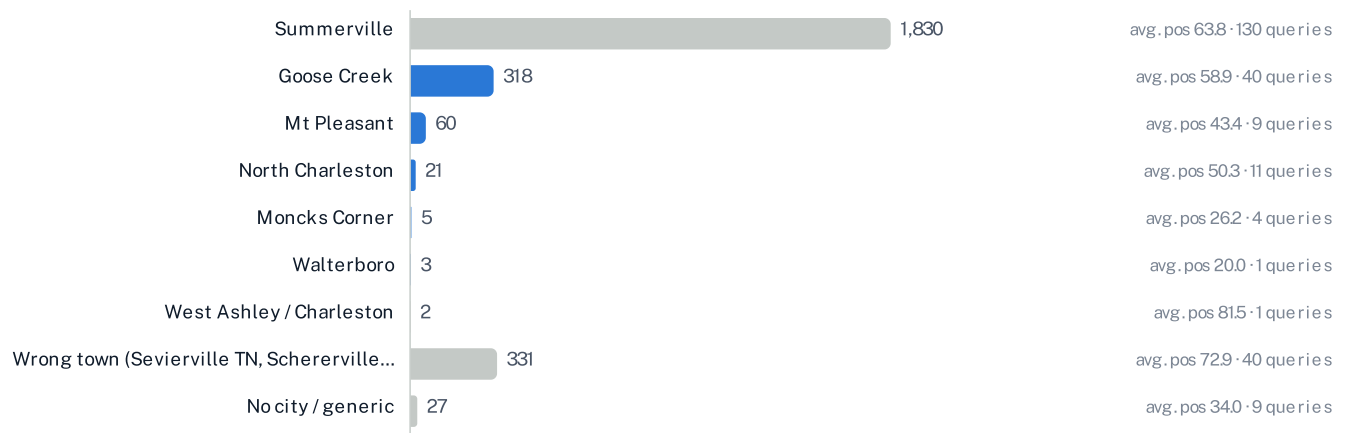

Highlighted: the two case types closest to page one

Car accidents are the volume (avg. position 66.4); dog bites and motorcycle accidents are the openings (avg. positions 28.5 and 43.4). Rideshare, drunk-driving-victim and delivery-driver searches are real demand with no dedicated pages.

Impressions by the city named in the search

Highlighted: cities whose pages were removed in the rebuild

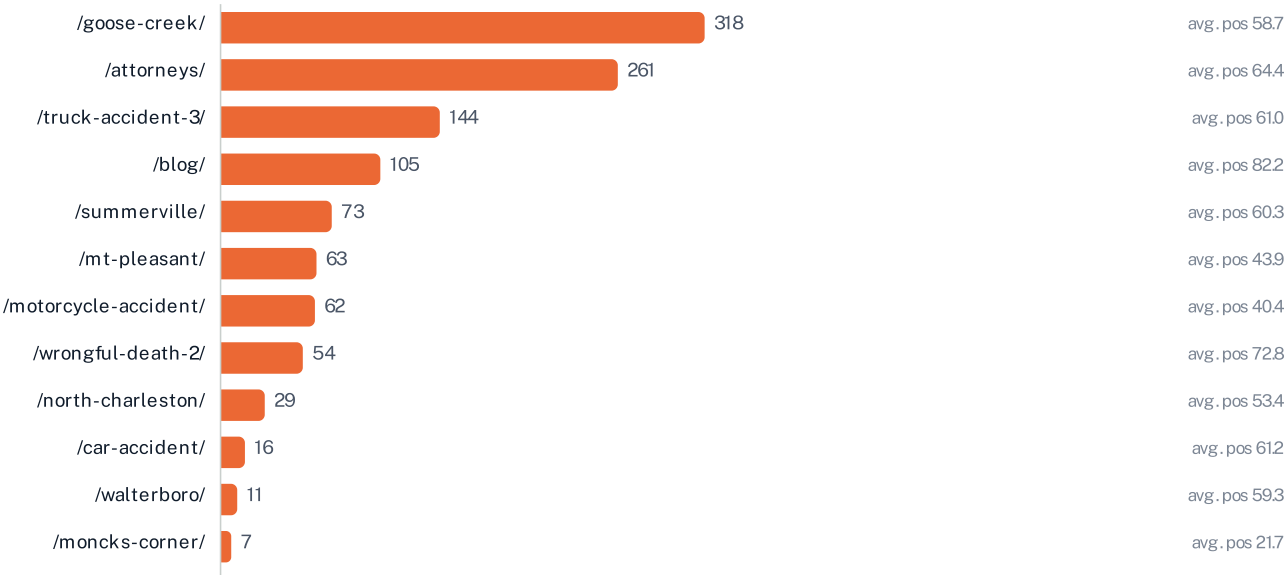

Goose Creek alone produced 318 impressions — and its page now returns “not found”. The “wrong town” row (331 impressions: Sevierville TN, Schererville IN, Somerville MA...) means Google isn't yet sure where this Summerville is: the site needs the firm's address, map and structured data on every page.

Spanish-language searches (“abogado de accidentes carro summerville”) produced 66 impressions with no Spanish page — a cheap page to add and a market the big Charleston firms mostly ignore in Summerville and Goose Creek.

4.4 Removed pages that are still being shown

Impressions landing on pages that now say “This page could not be found”

17 old-site URLs · 1,164 impressions

These pages were indexed before the rebuild (Search Console still shows them as “Submitted and indexed”, last crawled July 20–23) and are still shown to searchers — who land on a not-found page. Each one needs a permanent redirect to the closest new page, and the city pages deserve rebuilding.

4.5 Duplicate addresses and identical titles

Search Console reports the non-www home page as “Duplicate, Google chose different canonical than user”: the site answers at both www. and non-www addresses, each claiming to be the original. Google chose <https://www.summervilleaccidentattorney.com/>. The non-www copies of the practice pages also collect impressions (motorcycle accidents at position 20.5, dog bites at 25). Fix: pick www, 301-redirect everything else to it, and make every internal link and canonical tag agree.

Every page on the site carries the same title: “Summerville Accident Attorney | Personal Injury Lawyers | Frost Law Group”. The headings are good (“Summerville Dog Bite Lawyers”), but the title is the cover Google reads first. Appendix C has a proposed title per page.

truck accident lawyer summerville	11	29.7	Retitle the truck page; redirect /truck-accident-3/ to it; add I-26 corridor and trucking-regulation FAQs.

4.7 Technical findings on the injury site

Fix first 17 removed pages need permanent redirects (table above).

Until they are redirected, Google keeps showing not-found pages and the reputation those addresses had earned is lost.

Fix first www and non-www both live; Google and the site disagree on the original.

One address per page. Redirect non-www to www and fix the canonical tags.

Fix first One title tag across the whole site.

See Appendix C for the proposed titles.

Fix soon No city pages, no blog, no Spanish page on the new site.

The old site had city pages that earned most of the impressions; the new one has an “Areas We Serve” heading with nothing under it. Rebuild Goose Creek first.

Fix soon Weak “where are we” signals.

13% of impressions come from searches about other towns called Summerville/Sevierville/Schererville. Put the full address, an embedded map, county names and LegalService structured data on every page; link the Business Profile and the main site prominently.

Improve Stock hero images are hot-linked from Unsplash.

Replace with real photos of Jack, Tara, the office and Summerville — the same photos that go on the Business Profile. Real photos also feed the E-E-A-T signals Google uses for legal content.

Keep Review snippets and breadcrumbs are already detected as rich results.

Keep them; add Attorney, LegalService and FAQPage markup alongside.

Two websites: the honest pros and cons

You asked for a straight answer on whether to keep both sites. Here is the evidence, the trade-offs in plain language, and the rules that make two sites work if that's the choice.

The same injury searches show both sites

Average position per site for the searches both domains appeared for Both dots are far from page one for every shared search. Two weak pages on two domains don't add up to one strong page; Google picks one to show and the other dilutes it. Whatever we decide, only one domain should target injury searches.

Why two sites can work

- Two clear subjects. Google rewards focus. A site that is only about injuries, and a site that is only about estate, probate and criminal, are each easier to make “the shelf” than one site that is about everything.
- The domain says what it is. “summervilleaccidentattorney.com” matches what injury clients type, and it lets the injury practice look and sound different (urgent, free consultation, 24/7) from the calm, family estate-planning brand.
- Two chances on the page. When both are strong, a brand search and some local searches can show both domains — two of ten results instead of one.
- Different audiences, different partners. Estate planning is referred by financial advisors and CPAs; injury work by chiropractors, body shops and past clients. Separate sites make each referral story clean.
- The main site keeps its head start. Google's AI is already quoting the main site for estate and probate questions; keeping injuries off it protects that focus.

What it costs you

- Reputation splits. Every link, mention and review builds one domain. The injury site starts from almost nothing and currently averages position 57.4.
- One Business Profile, one Yelp. A business gets one profile and it links to one website. The injury site is not connected to the map listing that already produces most of your impressions.
- Double the work. Two sets of pages, titles, redirects, content, videos and monthly checks. The plan below assumes you have the capacity (or a partner) for both.
- Same firm, same address, same phone on two sites. Google needs to be told clearly that these are one firm with two practice sites, or it may treat one as a copy.
- Cannibalization is already happening (chart above) and has to be engineered away.
- Brand confusion. Someone who searched “Frost Law Group” after a crash should land on the injury site, not the estate site — that routing has to be designed.

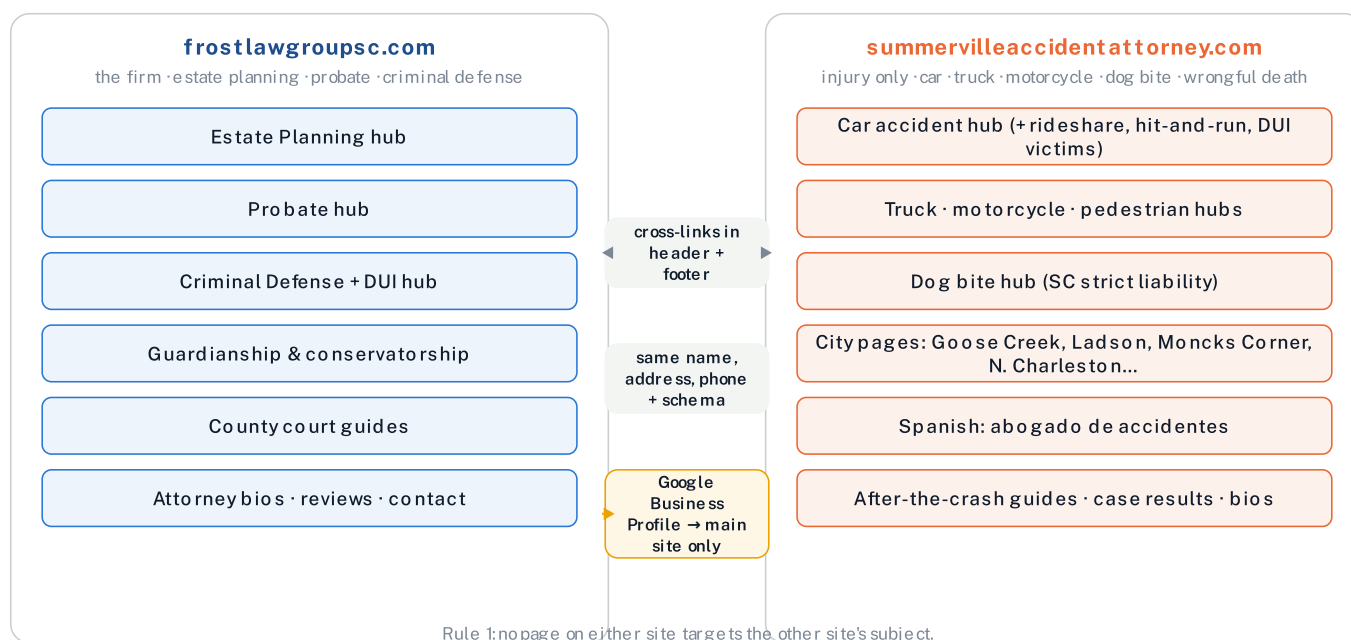

Our recommendation

Keep both — but only under the seven rules below, and with a checkpoint. The data supports the split: the main site's strength is estate, probate and criminal (that is where Google already trusts it), and the injury market in Summerville is dominated by large firms with big review counts, which a focused, family-run injury site can position against better than a general practice page can. The risks are all manageable if the sites are wired correctly from day one.

The checkpoint: at the end of month six, the injury site should have at least a handful of searches on page one (dog bite, motorcycle, Goose Creek) and its first non-brand clicks every week. If it doesn't, we fold it into the main site as `/personal-injury/` with permanent redirects — nothing built is wasted, because every page moves with it.

How the two sites are wired

One subject per site, cross-linked, one Business Profile pointing at the main site

The seven rules for running two sites

- ☐ One subject per site. The main site's `/motor-vehicle-personal-injury` page is redirected (301) to the injury site's car-accident page; the “Personal Injury” menu item links across. No injury pages on the main site; no estate, probate or criminal pages on the injury site. Where subjects touch — a DUI charge is criminal (main site), a crash caused by a drunk driver is injury (injury site) — the boundary is written down.
- ☐ Say it's one firm. Identical name, address and phone on both; LegalService structured data on both that lists the other site and the Business Profile in `sameAs` ; attorney bios on both that link to each other.
- ☐ Cross-link in the header and footer with descriptive words (“Our injury practice: Summerville Accident Attorney”), not just a logo.

- ☐ The Business Profile links to the main site (https, no www). The injury site gets its own signals: Avvo, Justia, FindLaw and Super Lawyers profiles for Jack updated to list it; the LinkedIn company page and YouTube channel link both; the Instagram bio uses a link page with both.
- ☐ Separate content calendars, no crossover. Two answer pages a week on the main site, one on the injury site. The injury site also gets the Spanish page and the city pages.
- ☐ Route the brand. The main site's home page gets a visible “Injured in an accident?” panel linking to the injury site; the injury site's header says “A Frost Law Group practice” linking back.
- ☐ Measure them separately, monthly (two Search Console properties, already in place) and hold the month-six checkpoint.

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

Two stores, one owner. Each store sells one thing and says so on the sign. Both stores have the same name on the door and point customers to the other store when they walk into the wrong one. And we agree now: if the second store isn't earning its keep in six months, we merge it into the first — without throwing away anything on its shelves.

The topical-authority plan: write the shelf

Four hubs on the main site, two on the injury site. Each hub is an existing practice page rebuilt as the center of a cluster; each spoke is a page that answers one question people ask. Blue outlines are pages to build.

6.1 Main site clusters

Estate Planning cluster

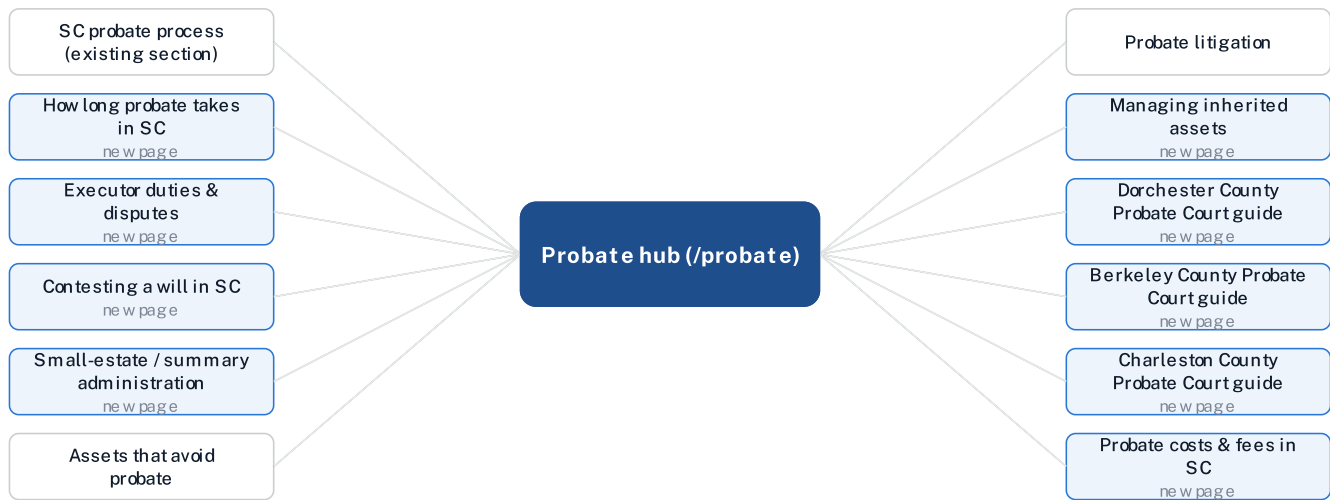

Hub: the existing estate-planning page · 12 spokes, 8 new

The existing will, trust, POA and living-will pages become spokes with proper titles. New spokes come straight from Search Console: asset protection (six different searches), blended families, trust amendments and restatements, guardianship, costs, and “what happens without a will”.

Probate cluster

Hub: the existing probate page · 12 spokes, 9 new

Probate is where Google's AI already quotes you. The county court guides (Dorchester, Berkeley, Charleston) are the kind of useful, local page nobody else in Summerville has written — and they attract links from local organizations.

Criminal Defense cluster

Hub: the existing criminal-defense page · 12 spokes, all new

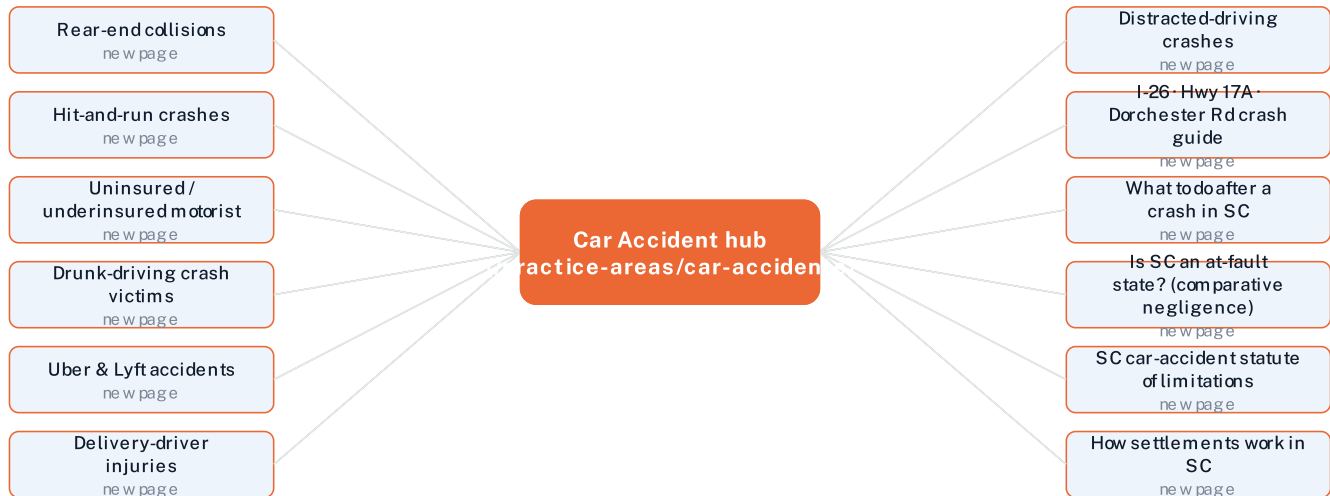

DUI is the biggest gap: 24 DUI searches, 410 impressions, no DUI page. Jack's fourteen years in law enforcement is the story every page in this cluster should tell — "a former deputy, now on your side" is a real, defensible difference.

6.2 Injury site clusters

Car Accident cluster

Hub: the existing car-accident page · 12 spokes, all new

Search Console already shows demand for hit-and-run, drunk-driving-victim, uninsured-motorist, distracted-driving, rideshare and delivery-driver searches — almost all of them with “Goose Creek” or “Summerville” attached.

The other injury hubs and the city pages

Existing practice pages plus six city pages and a Spanish page

City pages are only worth building if they are genuinely local: the roads and intersections, the hospital people get taken to, the police department that writes the report, the courthouse, directions from that town to the office.

6.3 How every page is built

Hub page (a practice area)

- Title: “[Practice] Attorney in Summerville, SC | Frost Law Group”
- Opens with a 40–60 word answer to “what do you do and for whom”
- Sections for each service, each linking to its spoke page
- “How it works here” — Dorchester/Berkeley/Charleston specifics
- Attorney box: who handles it, credentials, photo
- Reviews about this practice area
- 6–8 FAQs (taken from the fan-out questions) with FAQ markup
- Embedded video (2–5 minutes) and its transcript

Answer page (a spoke)

- Title is the question, in the words people use
- First paragraph answers it directly — the sentence Google can quote
- Then the detail: steps, timelines, costs, statute names, local court
- Three to five follow-up questions (the next fan-out) answered briefly
- Links up to the hub and sideways to two related spokes
- Author and “reviewed on” date; Attorney markup
- 60–90 second vertical video from Jack or Tara, embedded
- 800–1,500 words; no filler

Site-wide rules

- ☐ Every page links to its hub; every hub links to every spoke; no page is more than two clicks from the home page.
- ☐ One page per question. If two pages could rank for the same search, merge them.
- ☐ Structured data on every page: LegalService (organization), Attorney (bios), FAQPage (answer blocks), VideoObject (embedded videos), BreadcrumbList.
- ☐ Real photos, real names, real courts. Google's quality guidelines for legal content weight who wrote it and whether they are who they say they are.
- ☐ Publish, then request indexing in Search Console; check impressions on the new page at 14 and 45 days.

High intent, long tail, and where to win first “High intent” means the person is ready to hire (“dui lawyer summerville sc”). “Long tail” means specific, longer questions with fewer searches each but far less competition — and they add up. We rank both by how close you already are, using your own Search Console positions.

The first group is verbatim from Search Console (with impressions and position). The second group is the logical next layer of the same clusters — questions Google's AI will fan out to once the hubs exist. No third-party numbers are used; the test for each is “is this the exact question a Summerville family asks?”

7.4 The “win fast” order

Fast wins are searches where you already sit at positions 4–20 and the fix is a better page, not a new reputation. In order:

1. Main site, week 1–2: retitle every page (Appendix C) and fix the addresses. This alone touches every search in the 4–20 band.
2. Main site, week 3–4: the DUI page and the guardianship page — both have demand with no page, and the profile already ranks #1 for DUI.

3. Main site, week 3–6: executor-disputes, trust-amendment, asset-protection and blended-family answer pages — the fan-out questions already at positions 4–10.
4. Injury site, week 1–2: the 17 redirects and the www fix.
5. Injury site, week 3–6: expand dog bites (closest to page one), rebuild Goose Creek, retitle motorcycle and truck, add the Spanish page.

Using Google's fan-out queries to our advantage

Fan-out is the biggest change in how Google works in years, and your Search Console already shows it happening. Here is the playbook.

8.1 Harvest the questions every month

In Search Console → Performance → Queries, filter with a regular expression for question words:

`^(who|which|what|how|where|when|can|does|is it|should)` . Sort by impressions. Every row is a question Google's AI asked on someone's behalf and considered your site for. Copy them into the content calendar.

8.2 Answer each one on its own page, answer-first

The AI is looking for the cleanest 40–60 word answer to that question, from a page that is clearly about that question, on a site that is clearly an authority on the subject. So: the question is the title and the H1; the first paragraph is the answer; the rest of the page earns the trust (statutes, steps, local court, who you are). Add the three to five follow-up questions the AI will ask next as short H2 sections.

8.3 Be the same firm everywhere

AI answers are built from many sources at once: your pages, your Business Profile, Yelp, Avvo, Justia, the SC Bar directory, LinkedIn, YouTube. They check that the facts agree — name, address, phone, attorneys, practice areas. Keep every listing identical and complete, and link them all in your structured data. This is also why Yelp matters for ChatGPT-style answers.

8.4 Put the answer in more than one format

The same answer as a page, as a short video with a transcript, as an FAQ block with markup, and as a Business Profile post gives the AI four consistent places to find it. Video transcripts on YouTube are indexed; a Frost video titled with the exact question is often the only video answer for a Summerville-specific question.

8.5 Worked example: guardianship

Search Console shows “which attorneys in summerville, sc handle contested guardianship cases?” — 39 impressions at an average position of 5.4 — with no guardianship page on the site. The plan: a hub page “Guardianship & Conservatorship Attorney in Summerville, SC”, three spokes (“What is a contested guardianship in SC?”, “How to become a legal guardian in Dorchester County”, “Conservatorship vs. power of attorney”), a four-minute video from Tara, FAQ markup, and a Business Profile post. Then we watch that question move from position 5 to position 1–2, and watch the AI answer start naming the firm.

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

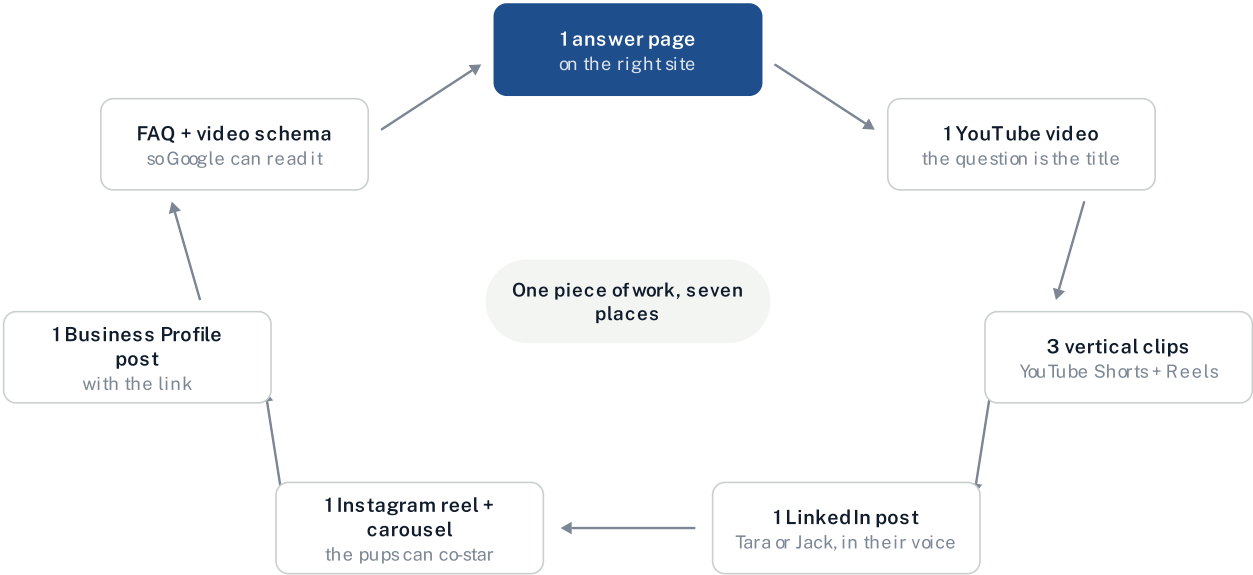

Google's AI is a student writing a report. It doesn't read one book; it asks ten small questions and grabs the clearest paragraph for each. We're going to write the clearest paragraph in Summerville for each of the questions it's already asking — and put your name on every one.

YouTube, LinkedIn, Instagram, the Business Profile and Yelp

The websites are where authority lives; the channels are how it spreads and how Google learns the firm is real, active and trusted. One piece of work feeds all of them.

The content flywheel

One answer page a week becomes seven assets

YouTube

1 long video + 3 shorts per week, filmed in one 90-minute session every other week.

Google owns it, indexes every transcript, and shows videos in results and AI answers.
There is no Frost Law Group channel today.

- Create the channel as the firm; link it from both sites, the Business Profile and LinkedIn.
- Series 1 — Ask a Summerville Lawyer: 60–90 second answers to the fan-out questions (vertical, Shorts).
- Series 2 — Probate in Plain English (Tara, 4–8 minutes): the probate process, executor duties, timelines, costs — one video per spoke page.
- Series 3 — Know Your Rights in SC (Jack, 3–6 minutes): DUI stops, bond hearings, what to say and not say — the former-deputy angle.
- Series 4 — After the Crash (injury site): what to do, insurance calls, dog bites, motorcycle bias.
- Title = the question. Description = the 60-word answer + link to the page. Chapters, captions and a pinned comment with the phone number.
- Embed every video on its page and mark it up as VideoObject.

LinkedIn

2 personal posts + 1
company post per week.

Where estate-planning referrals come from: financial advisors, CPAs, realtors, HR managers. Tara's and Jack's personal profiles reach more people than the company page.

- Tara posts weekly on estate and probate for professionals: “What a financial advisor should check before a client funds a trust”, “Three probate mistakes we see in Dorchester County”.
 - Jack posts weekly on criminal and injury topics for the community: bond hearings, what a police report means, the drunk-driving-victim path.
 - Company page shares every new answer page and video; website field → main site; injury posts link to the injury site.
 - Ask five referral partners a month to follow and comment; comment on theirs. Send a quarterly “what changed in SC estate law” post to the same list.
 - Add both attorneys' LinkedIn URLs to the Attorney structured data on both sites.

Instagram

3 posts per week: one reel, one carousel, one photo.

Your existing account (@frostlawgroupllc) is the human side: the husband-and-wife firm, the Golden Retrievers, Summerville. It builds brand recall and sends Google engagement and entity signals.

- Reels: the same vertical clips as YouTube Shorts (the question as on-screen text in the first second).
 - Carousels: “5 things to do after a dog bite in SC”, “What a will does and doesn't do”, “DUI stop: your 4 rights”.
 - The Frost Pups as a recurring feature — office life, Flowertown Festival, local events; geo-tag Summerville on everything.
 - Bio: a link page with both websites, the Business Profile review link and the phone number.
 - Highlights: Estate · Probate · Criminal · Injury · The Pups.

Google Business Profile

Weekly post, monthly photos, review ask at every matter.

It already produces more impressions than any page (4,405 in 79 days). Right now it is a plain listing: the “Attorney” category plus “Estate planning attorney”, a handful of photos, no posts.

- Website: change to <https://frostlawgroupsc.com/> (it currently stores <http://www.>).
- Categories: primary Estate planning attorney; add Criminal justice attorney, Personal injury attorney, Probate attorney, Elder law attorney, Trial attorney, Law firm.
- Photos: 20+ real photos (exterior with the sign, reception, conference room, Jack, Tara, Cassie, the dogs) — then two new photos a month.
- Services: keep the list, add a two-sentence description with the local phrase for each (“Summerville DUI defense...”).
- Posts: one a week, reusing the answer page and video; every post has a call to action.
- Q&A: seed eight questions (the fan-out questions) with the firm's answers.
- Reviews: ask at every closed matter with a direct link; goal four to six new reviews a month; reply to every review, including the one-star.
- Verify ownership: the public listing shows an “Own this business?” prompt, which Google typically displays when a profile isn't verified — confirm in the Business Profile dashboard.
- Hours: consider a 24/7 intake line for injury calls (an answering service) so the injury practice can honestly show extended availability.

Yelp

Complete once (week 3–4), then quarterly.

ChatGPT, Bing and Apple Maps use Yelp listings and reviews when someone asks them for a lawyer nearby. The listing exists (category: Criminal Defense Law) and is thin.

- Claim/verify and complete: categories Estate Planning Law, Wills Trusts & Probates, Criminal Defense Law, DUI Law, Personal Injury Law.
- “From the business” and specialties written as short answers to the fan-out questions.
- Ten real photos; hours; website → main site; phone.
- Respond to every review. Don't mass-solicit (Yelp filters that); do mention the Yelp page in the review email as a second option for clients who use Yelp.
- Update it quarterly so it stays “Updated [month]” in Google's results.

The 90-day plan, and the year after

Plumbing first, money pages second, then the weekly rhythm of answer pages and video. Nothing here depends on buying anything; it depends on Jack's and Tara's time in front of a camera and a partner who builds the pages.

Months 4–6: authority

- ☐ County court guides (Dorchester, Berkeley, Charleston probate courts; Summerville Municipal Court) — the pages local organizations link to.
- ☐ Local links: Summerville Chamber (already lists the firm), Dorchester County Bar, WealthCounsel directory, sponsorships (youth sports, Flowertown Festival), local news quotes. Update Avvo, Justia, FindLaw and Super Lawyers profiles to list both sites.
- ☐ Second layer of answer pages for each cluster (the “next-layer questions” in Section 7).

- ☐ Review milestone: 50+ Google reviews, with practice-area keywords appearing naturally in them.
- ☐ Month-six checkpoint on the injury site (Section 5).

Months 7–12: expansion

- ☐ Injury site: catastrophic-injury and workers'-comp clusters; case-results page; more city pages only where searches appear.
- ☐ Main site: special-needs planning, Medicaid/elder-law planning, business-owner estate planning; expungement and traffic clusters.
- ☐ Long-form YouTube (10–15 minutes) on the top three questions of the year; a quarterly LinkedIn newsletter for referral partners.
- ☐ Annual refresh: every hub page reviewed, dated and re-requested for indexing.

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

First we fix the plumbing so nothing leaks. Then we build the rooms people are asking for. Then, every week, we add one more book to the shelf and tell people about it in five places. Twelve months of that is how a two-person firm becomes the name Google says first.

How we'll know it's working

Five numbers from Search Console, checked monthly, plus the only number that really matters: calls and consultations.

SIGNAL		TODAY	WHAT GOOD LOOKS LIKE	WHERE TO SEE IT
Non-brand clicks per month (main site)		≈3	Growing every month; the first goal is double digits every month, then dozens	Performance → Queries, filter “does not contain frost”
Non-brand queries in positions 1–10 on real pages (main site)	86 in 4–10 (profile-inflated)		A growing count of estate/probate/criminal searches on page one from the pages themselves	Performance → Pages → pick a page → Queries
Question-style (fan-out) searches showing the site	19 questions · 180 impressions		More questions each month, average position moving toward 1–3	Queries filtered by the regular expression in Section 8
Injury site: queries on page one		0	Dog bite, motorcycle and Goose Creek searches on page one by month six	Injury property → Performance
Injury site: non-brand clicks per month		1 in 51 days	First weekly clicks by month three; the month-six checkpoint	Injury property → Performance
Calls, forms and consultations by source		not tracked	Every lead tagged: Google (site), Google (profile), Yelp, LinkedIn, referral	Call tracking + form field “how did you hear about us”

These are targets, not guarantees. Technical fixes usually show in Search Console within two to six weeks; new pages within six to twelve weeks; authority builds over six to twelve months. We report the actual numbers monthly, against this baseline.

E. Glossary

Impression

One time Google showed a page of yours on a results page (including in the map pack via your Business Profile link and in AI answers).

Click

One time a person chose that result.

Position

Where the result sat on the page, averaged over all the times it was shown. 1–10 is page one.

CTR

Click-through rate: clicks ÷ impressions.

Query

The exact words typed or spoken. Search Console hides very rare queries for privacy, which is why query totals are lower than site totals.

Brand / non-brand

Brand searches contain the firm's name ("frost"). Non-brand searches are people who don't know you yet — the only ones that grow a practice.

Canonical

The one official address for a page. When a page has several addresses, Google picks one and treats the rest as copies.

301 redirect

A permanent forward from an old address to a new one. It sends people and Google's trust to the new page.

Topical authority

Being the site Google trusts most on one subject, earned by covering the subject completely and coherently.

Fan-out

How Google's AI answers a big question: it splits it into smaller questions, searches each, and stitches the best paragraphs together.

Structured data (schema)

Machine-readable labels in the page code that tell Google exactly who you are (LegalService, Attorney), what a block is (FAQPage), and what a video is (VideoObject).

E-E-A-T

Experience, Expertise, Authoritativeness, Trust — the qualities Google looks for on legal and financial pages; shown with real authors, credentials, reviews and consistent facts.

F. Method notes

Both properties are domain properties in Google Search Console. The main site has data from 2026-06-22; the injury site from 2026-07-20. Query, page and date tables use the property's own reported values; where we group pages by address or queries by topic, the grouping is ours and the underlying numbers are unchanged. Page-level impressions can exceed site-level impressions because one search can show two of your pages. Positions are impression-weighted averages. Observations about the live pages (titles, headings, word counts, not-found pages) were made on September 11, 2026; Business Profile details are as shown publicly on Google the same day.
